

Solons Begin Abdicating Historic Fiscal Controls

By ALPHONZO BELL
Congressman, 28th District

Congress seems slowly to be abdicating to the executive branch its constitutional control of federal funds. Early in our history, Congress was able to fulfill its role in the check-and-balance system by maintaining its authority over government expenditure. But time has witnessed gradual deterioration of legislative power in this area.

Today, President Johnson can present a budget to Congress that is virtually a mandate. He can make it clear he will tolerate few changes by Congress. Recently blame for this situation has been assigned to an exceptionally strong and dominating President. But the trend was begun well before President

Johnson took office. Part of the fault lies within Congress and is inherent in the fiscal apparatus of both Houses. The dual authorization and appropriation processes in the House of Representatives typify many inefficient congressional procedures for dealing with monetary matters. Legislative committees, each with definite knowledge of what is needed in its area of jurisdiction but with no comprehensive view of the budget, advise upon adoption of various programs and authorize agency expenditures. The House almost always accepts recommendations of its legislative committees. A separate Appropriations Committee, however, controls the purse strings and almost simultaneously holds somewhat duplicative hearings of its own. Since a thorough review is needed to evaluate the complex budget, the House is even more apt to accept committee recommendations.

is parceled out to powerful Appropriations subcommittees, each has developed an exclusive area of expertise. Just as many Representatives acquiesce to the decisions of financially-oriented colleagues, so the full Appropriations Committee generally accepts the actions of its subcommittees.

to public welfare, and symbolic of what ails Congress, the resulting situation might be laughable. On one hand, when expenditure appears in the guise of legislation, Congress approves a program. When the time comes actually to grant funds, an expenditure which had earlier been deemed necessary can be drastically reduced or completely rejected. Partially at fault here is lack of liaison between substantive legislative committees and the Appropriations Committee.

AN INCIDENTAL irony is that sometimes the Appropriations Committee members may lack an overall view of expenditures and their impact on the nation's economy. Because the budget

Hospital Names Officers

Dr. J. R. Bloomfield, Torrance physician, has been elected chief of staff at Riviera Community Hospital, 4025 W. 226th St.

He succeeds Dr. Edward O. Mitchell as professional staff leader in the non-profit, interdenominational 96-bed hospital.

Also elected for the year beginning July 1 are Dr. Knowles Curwen, chief of staff elect; Dr. Gene Kaufman, secretary-treasurer, and Dr. Paul Bower, Dr. A. E. Sommer and Dr. Charles Ayers, members of the medical executive committee.

Installation ceremonies will be conducted at a dinner-dance tonight at Los Verdes Country Club. Invitations have been sent to the 200 members of the hospital's professional staff.

Dr. Bloomfield joined the staff of Riviera Hospital in 1959 and became a member of the board of trustees in 1961. Since then he has served on the medical executive committee.

Born and reared in Shanghai, China, Dr. Bloomfield came to California and UCLA for pre-med training. He obtained his medical degree from the University of Chicago Medical School. He interned at Vancouver General Hospital, Vancouver, B. C., and practiced in that Canadian city before coming to this area six and a half years ago.

He is a member of the Los Angeles County and American Medical Societies.

Dr. Bloomfield and his wife, Joyce, make their home in Rolling Hills Estates with their children, ages, 5, 8, and 11.
